AI Overview

A real-life example of a vendor is a clothing manufacturer that sells finished shirts and pants to a retail store. The retail store then sells these items to customers. In this scenario, the clothing manufacturer is the vendor, providing a product directly for sale to another business.

Here's a more detailed breakdown:

ABC Boutique:

This retail store buys clothing items from various manufacturers and sells them to the public.

XYZ Apparel:

This clothing manufacturer produces shirts, pants, and other items and sells them to ABC Boutique.

Key Role:

XYZ Apparel is the vendor in this case, supplying the finished goods that ABC Boutique then sells.

Supply Chain:

This illustrates the role of a vendor in the supply chain, acting as a link between the manufacturer and the retailer.
